THE NEW PLAYS

E. H. Sothern Revives "If I Were King."

BY CHARLES DARNTON

H. SOTHERN could not take leave of the stage more gracefully than in "If I Were King." rhich he revived at the Shubert Thetinus to present for two weeks in aid of the Actors' Fund.

"If I Were King" remains an adrable example of the romantic play, and Mr. Sothern's impersonation of the roystering post, Francois Villon, who suddenly finds himself a power court, is as dashing and youthful as it was years ago. It was a genplaying this beloved vagabond once rain, especially in the tavern scene, which he carried off with all his old college spirit. From a stage box wile Marlowe saw one of the most eligniful performances her husband

andra Carlisle gave grace and
